

2011 Krugerrand Launch Set

50 YEAR ANNIVERSARY OF THE FIRST DECIMAL COIN SERIES

1961 heralded great changes. The Republic of South Africa was proclaimed and the country ceased to be a member of the British Commonwealth. South Africa adopted a decimal coin system on 14 February 1961 and the currency was converted to decimal equivalents. The Pound became the new monetary unit called the Rand. The new series consisted of a 1/2 c and 1c bronze coin; a 2 1/2 c, 5c, 10c, 20c and 50c silver coin and a R1 and R2 gold coin.

The commemorative bi-metal medallion celebrates the 50 year anniversary of the Rand by depicting the change from the imperial pound to the decimal rand monetary unit. The years 1960/1961 and the highest denomination £1/R2 are featured as two latent images.

The mintmark on the 1 oz Krugerrand depicts the monetary units £ and R and the wording "50 Years".

The legal tender 22 carat gold Krugerrand was the brainchild of the South African Chamber of Mines and first became available to the public in 1967. The concept of the Krugerrand was basically to promote RSA gold and to enable the ordinary man on the street to be able to own his piece of RSA gold.

This unique gold coin would contain exactly 1 troy -ounce fine gold and its value would be connected to the daily gold price. It would be legal tender and sold at a relatively low premium over the current gold price. Intense marketing took place in America and Europe and soon the Krugerrand dominated the world's coin market over the next nine years. In 1980, the fractional Krugerrand (1/2 oz, 1/4 oz and 1/10 oz) coins were added to the 1-oz Krugerrand making the Krugerrand affordable to more people.

During the years when sanctions against the South African government were applied in the mid 1980's, other Mints elsewhere took the opportunity to issue their own legal tender bullion coins. However, the Krugerrand had become one of the world's leading brand names and remains so today in the 21st century.
